Sense of Bugs.

Intelligence Displayed by Editorial Cock-roaches. There is a cockroach that makes bis home on our desk that has got more sense than a delinquent subscriber. He—if it is a he one, we are not clear as to thatcomes out and sits on the side of the paste dish, and draws in a long breath. If the paste is fresh it eats it and wiggles his polonaise as much as to thank us, and goes away refreshed. If the paste is sour and smells bad, he looks at us with a mournful expression, and goes away looking as though it was a mighty mean trick to play on a cockroach, and he runs about as though he was offended. When a package of wedding cake is placed on the desk he is the first to find it out, and he sits and waits until we cut the string, when he goes into it and walks all over the cake till he strikes the bridal cake, when he gets on to it, stands on his head and seems to say "Yum, yum," and he is as tickled as a girl with a fresh beau. There is hu-man nature in a cockroach, When a man comes in and sits around with no business, on our busy day, and asks questions, and stays and keeps us from working, the cockroach will come out and sit on the inkstand, and look cross at the visitor as much as to say: "Why don't you go about your business and leave the poor man alone, so he can get some copy, and not keep us all standing around here doing nothing?" But when the paper is out, and there is a lock of cheerfulness about the place, and we are anxious to have friends call, the cockroach flies arcund over the papers and welcomes each caller as pleasantly as he can and seems to enjoy it. One day the paste smelled pretty bad, and we poured about a spoonful of whisky in it and stirred it up. The cockroach came out to breakfast and we never saw a person seem to enjoy the meal any more than the cockroach did. It seemed as though he couldn't get enough paste. Pretty soon he put one hand to his head and looked cross-eyed. He tried to climb down off the paste dish and fell over himself and turned a flip-flap on the blotting paper. Then he looked at us in a sort of mysterious way, winked one eye, as much as to say, "You think you are smart, don't you, old baldy?" Then he put one hand to his forehead, as if in meditation, and staggered off into a drawer, coming out presently with his arm around another cockroach, and he took him to the paste pot and he filled up, too, and then they locked arms and paraded up and down on the green cloth of the desk as though singing "We won't go home till morning," and then kicked over the steel pen and acted a good deal like politicians after a caucus. Finally some remark was made by one of them that didn't suit and they pitched in and had the worst the paste smells peculiar he goes and gets another cockroach to eat some of it first, and he watches the effect. Now, you wouldn't believe it, but that Now, you wouldn't believe it, but that cockroach can tell the minute he sees a man whether the man has come in with a bill or has come to pay money. We don't know how he does it, but when a man has a bill the cockroach begins to look solemn and mournful, and puts his hands to his eyes as though weeping. If a man comes in to pay money the cockroach begins to conserve the solemn and mournful, and puts his hands to his eyes as though weeping. If a man comes in to pay money the cockroach begins to conserve the solemn and mournful, and puts his hands to his eyes as though weeping. If a man comes in to pay money the cockroach begins to conserve the solemn and mournful, and puts his hands to his eyes as though weeping. If a man comes in to pay money the cockroach can tell the minute he sees a man every department of our store we are showing hundreds of articles that will make a useful and acceptable Christmas Gift. As we cannot begin to enumerate what we display to call and look through our stock new goods every day. Everything will be offered at the VERY LOWEST PRICES.

VERY LOWEST PRICES. a man comes in to pay money the cock-roach looks glad. a smile plays around his mouth and he acts kitteny. He acts the most human when ladies come into the office. If a book agent comes in he makes no attempt to conceal his disgust. One day an old person came in with a life of Garfield and laid it on the table, opened to the picture of the candidate and left it. The cockroach walked through the violet ink and got his feet all covered, and then he walked all over that book and left his mark. The woman saw the tracks and thought we had signed our names, and she said she was sorry that we had written our signature there, because she had another book for subscribers' names. When a handsome lady comes in the cockroach is in his element, and there is a good deal of proud flesh upon him. He puts his thumbs in the armholes of his vest and walks around. One day we put our face up to a deaf young lady to speak to her, and the cockroach looked right the other way, and seemed te be busy looking over an old copy of the Christian Statesman, but when he found that we only yelled at the lady, he winked as much as to say, "Well, how did I know?" O, that cock roach is a thoroughbred, -Peck's Sun.

Dr. BROWNING is a regular graduate of medicine, a skillful pharmacist, and a thorough chemist. His "C. & C." (Cough and Cold) Cordial is not the result of mere chance, but of long scientific research in chemistry and medicine, as is plainly seen by the rapidity of its action and its unparalleled efficacy. The expense in its manufacture is at least five times as great as that of any other medicine upon the market, and yet it is sold at the exceedingly low price of 50c. DR. GREENE is ready at any time to meet a committee of the Lancaster County Medical Society at the Opera House or elsewhere to discuss the merits of Omnipathy and prove its superiority over all other pathies in vogue. The people are greatly interested and demand the fullest investigation. Invalids are every week dying in this county whose lives
